

Tarot Readings

Contributed by Layli Behin
Saturday, 16 September 2006

Tarot readings are very popular activities on the Internet. You can find any number of websites that offer tarot readings for free, and some charge a fee. Whether you are serious about your readings, or dabble with one now and then for fun, you have to admit it's an interesting pastime.

To get more out of your tarot readings, you should know a little about the cards you see. Each site or tarot reader has their own interpretation of what each card means, and many decks of tarot cards have different cards, but the basic meanings remain the same. As a starting point, you might want to visit your local library or bookstore, and pick up a book about tarot readings and cards. Look for something that talks about the basic cards and what they mean. You may also want to look into the history of tarot readings so you better understand the idealism behind it.

Many people get upset when they get the death card in tarot readings. The card is not as scary as it sounds. Death, in most cases, simply signifies a major change. That change could be for good or bad. The ultimate meaning can be found in the other cards in your tarot reading. They determine if the death card change will be a positive or negative one.

You can do your own tarot card readings, but this is really hard to do. It is hard for you to remain objective and read what the cards are really saying. If you really want a great reading, find someone else to do it for you. Many online tarot card readings have you choose your own cards, they give you the meaning behind the cards, but the final interpretation is up to you. This may be fun, but it is hard to really understand what the cards are saying in such a reading. Take what comes up with a grain of salt.

Tarot readings are fun, but don't let them rule your day-to-day life. Don't panic when you get what you think is a negative card or reading. Quite often these can be seen as chances to change the negative things in your life. Think of tarot readings as guides rather than dire predictions of the end of the world. If you are really interested in tarot readings, go have one done in person. While there are many unscrupulous people in the world, there are genuine tarot readers out there. Use your intuition when visiting someone for tarot readings. If you get a bad feeling, move on until you find someone who makes you feel comfortable.